Penn Museum Show Portrays Wars Of Long Ago

REG CATHEY, actor who starred in award-winning television series “The Wire,” “Homicide: Life on the Streets,” and “Oz,” became a Roman General named Cato for a dramatic reading on Sunday afternoon at Penn Museum. Cathey is part of a nonprofit called Outside the Wire, which presents dramatic readings around country, stimulating town hall discussions of war, courage, patriotism, and virtue. Sunday’s offering, excerpts from Joseph Addison’s 18th-century play Cato, dealt with Roman civil war, with Cato pitched against Julius Caesar. Panel discussion which followed included panelists Capt. Sean Casey, a veteran of Iraq; Majid Alsayegh, chairman of Intercultural Journeys; Liz White, an official of Red Cross, who worked for months at Ground Zero; and Penn Prof. Carolyn Marvin from Annenberg School of Communications. Phyllis Kaufman, co-director of Outside the Wire, is a Philadelphia native and Bryn Mawr College graduate. Photo by Bonnie Squires
